

Business Overview

RE: Corporate Office Furniture & Space Planning

Specifications

SUMMARY OF THE BUSINESS -

For nearly 30 years, this Kansas City-based corporate office furniture and space planning business has made a name for itself as a "go-to" for aesthetic and functional office design. Offices and a showroom are in a standalone, 18,000-sq. ft. space. While some inventory is kept there, the bulk of over $250,000 worth of inventory is housed in the company's separate 30,000-sq. ft. warehouse.

Projects vary in size from $1,200 to the low to mid 6-figures. Many customers buy on a regular basis, contributing to $1,000,000-worth of monthly business that the company sees. The business is not set up for consumer retail transactions, and positions itself as a service dealership for corporate companies. Adding a consumer retail division is a growth area to consider

Contracted workers handle delivery and installation of pieces, and the company has warehouse staff for quality assurance. The owner works about 25 hours/week on recruiting and reviewing financials and booked sales. A staff of 21 allows him to take significant time away from the business if desired.

This is an excellent business with an outstanding reputation and repeat clientele. No immediate growth is needed to ensure steady sales and profits, as the company is a well-oiled machine. An ambitious buyer could take the business and expand in any number of ways.

Inventory

Over $250,000 worth of inventory is housed between the showroom and warehouse.

- 30,000-sq. ft. warehouse
 - o "tall hat" can stack inventory
- As the manufacturing industry is now more capable to produce and ship faster, furnishing companies no longer need to keep as much stock
 - The seller likes to work with regional and Midwestern manufacturers for lower cost and for a greener footprint
 - Many American companies that moved factories oversees are trending toward bringing those back to the U.S.
- Business aims to position itself with the inventory volume and resources necessary to meet the needs of any contract furnishing customer
- Additionally, a company needs to have the right inventory volume to maintain manufacturing relationships and manufacturing prices
- Most projects have some customization aspect, and the majority of inventory is ordered for specific client needs
- There is some inventory maintained for emergency needs and impulsive purchases
- Factory stocking programs are utilized specific numbers of desk units, seating, filing, etc.

Growth Opportunities

- Add a retail office division
 - The business does not operate for retail transactions, but offering an outlet of sorts for home offices would provide new customer traffic
 - This would capture home office clients looking for high-end pieces that cannot be found in the likes of Staples, etc.
- Increase used office furniture offerings
 - While many clients that come in for used furniture end up purchasing new pieces, this is also a great way to increase the client base
 - The Warehouse Manager has been a good source for finding used furniture
